✓ A PARAMOUNT-BURTON HOLMES TRAVEL-PICTURE ✓

The Paramount-Burton Holmes release for Feb. 13th takes Mr. Holmes' fellow-travelers to the quaint little capital city of Palma de Majorca, on the island of Majorca, one of the Balearic Islands, off the coast of Spain. You set sail from Barcelona and make a short, overnight trip, to find yourself nearing the port of Palma, entering this lovely bay the next morning.

All women are interested in "head-gear"; they will see something new in Palma, the "rebozillo" worn by the ladies of these interesting islands; very pretty young ladies show how it is put on, which in itself is a novelty. Charming scenes of country life, a visit to the beautiful old convent, lovely vistas, villages, and a very picturesque and interesting people, go about the events of their daily life just as though no movie-man was within a thousand miles of them. Olives, olive-oil and delicious wines are the principal products. Mr. Holmes shows you a clever way of preventing the adulteration of food for children, which is accomplished by a method of direct feeding, from goat to child,--which absolutely cuts out the "middle-man".
